NEW SUPERIOR COURT CASES

Filed with Clerk on Wednesday-Twenty-Four thus Far for the First Tuesday in April-New Divorces.

April 12, 1996, payable a year from that date, and nothing has been paid thereon.

On a common count Charles J. Ducy brings suit against Dennis J. Quill and wife to recover $1,500.

Ezra J. Hempstead of Waterford, in his appeal from the board of relief of that town, claims that the assessors added to his list the Hagberg, Greene, Reynolds, J. Reynolds, Clark and Crofton cottages and one boathouse which are standing on the plaintiff's land but are not his property and which are owned by non-residents. The board of relief refused to grant his petition for the relief desired.

Jefferson O. Balley of Groton sues Gapero Freno of New London and others for the foreciosure of a mortgage and possession of the mortgaged property. The amount of the note is $1,200, and $2,000 damages is sought.

On a common count Charles R. Beebe and others of New London sue Albert N. Fetherson of New London for $2,200.

abounded in music and dancing, with no remarkable singers, although a few proved to have good voices, although not over strong. To a large number, at least, the play was a decided disappointment, a few of the cast, however, doing fairly well in their roles. There was little or no plot to the piece and the songs were not particularly catchy.

and the songs were not particularly catchy.

The theme of the play revolves around a love affair—a Parisian one, at that, in which two lovers, believing they love each other, bind themselves to Satan, if they are unable to defy him for a year. They afterwards come to the conclusion that their love is but a myth, and cach travels his separate path. This gives Mephisto the victory and he is just about to claim his judgment when again the shafts of Cupid's darts are felt, and the Wicked One himself, entranced by the wiles of his affinity, falls victim to her charms and by a condition of the wiles of his affinity, falls victim to her charms and by a condition of the bargain loses his judgment.

The part of Mephisio was ably taken by Arthur Lett, whose character impersonation of Satan is an art in itself. Mr. Lett has a strong voice, and during the play rendered several catchw numbers. That Wasn't All, Very Well Then, and They Were Actors, the latter a character recitation, were well done. Sam Lewis as the Hebrew pleased.

Mile, Prager, the dancer, was featured as the star of the production. Like other dancers, she is light, airy and graceful. She is a tip of the toe dancer and her movements are all executed with agility. It was nothing which the audient went wild over, however.

Two other important parts were well taken by the Misses Finlay and Gibson. These girls both have musical voices and Miss Finlay scored in By the Light of the Silvery Moon, while Any Old Place in the World With You. sung in company with Mr. Naughton was probably Miss Gibson's best.

Melody of Harry Lauder's songs was well given and demanded an encore, but the sensation came in Those Musical Girls, who with bells all over them, gave an exhibition which stirred the house. The piece was not up to the standard. There is little to say of the supporting company.

There have been twenty-four new cases brought for the superior court and returned for the first Tuesday in April. In addition to several which have previously been published are the following:

Frank H. Foss of Norwich and Ruth H. Brewster of East Hartford, as heirs of the estate of Rebecca B. Foss, sue George H. Brewster of New London, formerly of Gloucester, Mass., for $1,000, it being claimed that he gave Mrs. R. B. Foss a note for $750 on April 12, 1906, payable a year from that date, and nothing has been paid thereon.

On a common count Charles J. Ducy brings suit against Dennis J. Quill and wife to recover $1,500.

Ezra J. Hempstead of Waterford, in his appeal from the board of relief of that town, claims that the assessors added to his list the Hagberg, Greene, Reynolds, J. Reynolds, Clark and Crofton cottages and one boathouse which are standing on the plaintiff's land but are not his property and and ice. He received a broken right ankle.

For the foreclosure of a mortgage, for $1,000 Charles H. Latham of Groton, administrator of the estate of W. H. Latham, sues Julia A. Lord and others of New London.

C. H. Williams of Groton asks that a receiver be appointed for the Hawkins English Wafer company, with power to dispose of the business.

To recover the sum of $1,144.83 on a note. Carrie E. Woodruff of Hartford sues William Clingan of Woodbridge, administrator of the estate of Jane A. Sharp of Waterford, for $1,500. In this case a plea to the jurisdiction has been entered by the defendant.

Degree Work for Pinochle Club.

A large and elaborately decorated card displayed in George Haven's shop announces a special meeting of the Taftville Pinochle club at midnight on Saturday, April 2, "at the wigwam on the mountain," which to the initiated means St. Louis hall, The notice, which is the clever work of William C. Kendall, one of the members recently admitted, shows pictures of the club and its Indian degree team, announces the purpose of the meeting to be the slaughter of the innocents and requests every member to bring his tomahawk. It promises to be a banner night for the club.

Progress at Velvet Mill. Progress at Velvet Mill.

The men under Foreman John Vetter who have been engaged in putting in the automatic sprinkler system for protection against fire at the velvet mill additions, have finished there and will now finish up at the Ponemah company's weave shed. The work at the velvet mill is progressing nicely, the carpenters having completed much of their work on the storehouse, offices, etc., in the south addition, while the painters are now working there.
